

Adriana Torres has a Degree in Lyrical singing and a University Degree in Primary Education. She has given many opera, zarzuela, Oratorio and Spanish popular songs Concerts in venues such as Manuel de Falla Auditorium, Basilica of San Juan de Dios, or Granada Conference Center.

Since 2018 she has participated in the educational innovation Project of Granada University called “El Aula de Educación Musical para niños y niñas de la Facultad de Ciencias de la Educación: un espacio de Investigación e Innovación para la mejora en la formación de docentes” (Music education classroom for boys and girls in the Faculty of Educational Sciences: a space for research and innovation to enable the improvement of teacher education). In addition to this, she has organized and taught several seminars and trainings in early music education for teachers, as the course “Educational music: building the citizen through artistic experiences and collaborative work”, in collaboration with Granada Educa Foundation and supported by the Department of Education of the Regional Government of Andalusia.

As cultural manager, she organizes, within Proyecto Gorgoritos, family concerts and other activities connected with music and literature, in collaboration with spaces such as Museo Memoria de Andalucía or the University of Granada. Since 2014 she has been coordinator of “Gorgoritos music, art and education”, a spin-off business endeavor of Granada University